IMPORTANT TO TRAVELLERS

WHAT TO DO WITH YOUR BAGGAGE

It is quite customary for people travelling by rail and occupying apartments or seats in parlor cars to take at least a portion of their baggage with them in the car. When they go out for refreshment at stations they leave their baggage [illegible] without any special protection. By a recent decision in England it would seem that baggage thus situated is at a risk of the owner, and if it is lost or stolen the railroad company will not be held liable.

The suit was for the recovery of damages for the loss of a travelling bag. The plaintiff took this bag to the station and placed it along with some other things in a first class carriage in which he and his wife were to travel. He asked the porter if the things would be safe while he and his wife went to luncheon and was told they would be. They then went [illegible] to get something to eat and on their return to the car just as the train was starting the plaintiff discovered that the bag was gone. The Court held that a common carrier was liable for all goods placed absolutely under his control, but as the plaintiff had requested to have his bag [illegible] in the car where he was to travel [illegible] consented to its being placed [illegible] the company could not be held liable [illegible] of the goods.

From this it will be perceived that the only safe way is to have baggage put in the baggage car and checked, thus placing it under the absolute control of the company, or to keep strict watch of it if it is taken into a passenger car. An assurance from some one in the employ of the company that it is safe avails nothing in the event of its loss. The strict and long-established rule which holds common carriers liable in almost every case does not apply where the owner of the property chooses to retain it at least partially in his own keeping.

Princeton College at Princeton, N. J., has been the scene of undue excitement of late owing to the perverse disposition of the upper graduates in regard to hazing. The difficulty lay between the sophomores and freshmen and the result was the dismissal of eight sophomores [illegible] freshmen [illegible] of thirty sophomores or fifty students in all. [illegible] [illegible] the result [illegible] that Princeton College is under the [illegible] of the Presbyterian Church and draws its students from the wealthy class [illegible] the South. Consequently a pretty [illegible] lot of [illegible] at Princeton [illegible] and when [illegible] spring [illegible] the [illegible] of the disobedient elements is excellent work and may in the end tend to [illegible] the [illegible] in the institution [illegible]

MILD WEATHER AND COD FISHING.—So mild was the weather in the neighborhood of St. John, N. F., that many boats visited the fishing [illegible] and procured a dozen or so [illegible] fish and a dozen or so secured three quintals on Christmas eve, which was readily sold for $[illegible] a quintal. This fresh fish was [illegible] to St. John's fishermen who rarely see fresh cod from December to March. The papers call upon the fishermen to reform this custom [illegible] which so many of them enjoy and draw from that inexhaustible bank which is ever ready to meet their demands. Millions of cod are waiting to be taken but the grounds are never visited during the above months.

A correspondent of the Scientific American says: The best remedy for bleeding at the nose as given by Dr. Gleason [illegible] of his lectures is in the vigorous motion of the jaws as if in the act of mastication. In the case of a child a wad of paper should be placed in its mouth, and the child instructed to chew it hard. It is the motion of the jaws that stops the flow of the blood. This remedy is so very simple that many will feel inclined to laugh at it, but it has never been known to fail in a single instance [illegible] severe cases.

A correspondent asks what is the best method of feeding cattle in winter? We don't exactly know. One man might prefer to take the ox in his lap and feed him with a spoon. Another would bring him into the dining room and let him sit by the old folks. [illegible] differ in matters of this kind.

The following belongs to Green Erin and may be seen on a tombstone in a town near Dublin:

Here lies the body of John Mound
Lost at sea and never found.

CONCERNING MORALS

I asked an intelligent man to-day why morals and manners are not invariably taught in public schools as they used to be. The answer was that he knew not how they could be better taught. [illegible] What I mean by morals is that it is wicked, wrong and disgraceful to steal, to swear and to lie.

By manners I mean that gentle deportment of a child which will insure him a favorable consideration from older people.

Dick is a pupil in the primary school. He does not know why he may not take a lump of sugar from the sugar-bowl without his mother's consent. He has never been told not to swear. He lies a little upon occasion. Tom and Harry do so. As far as example is concerned, this is all upon one side. He is too young to know these things are not right. Whatever punishment he gets, in way of discipline from his teacher is plainly to make him a tolerable companion for her, else he would worry her into a nervous fever.

"Dick, speak now, answer me these questions."

"Have you been a good boy to-day?"

"Yes sir, [illegible] I whispered and lost my recess."

"Did you get your lessons?"

"All but [illegible] two words in spelling and my teacher checked me for those."

"But these are not crimes, Dick. Did your teacher ever punish you for swearing or lying or stealing?"

"She wouldn't dare to. If my mother knew it, she'd catch it I guess. Catch me in a lie? No sir—I swear sometimes, but she never hears me. I don't know what stealing is."

"What, Dick?"

"Well, would you think it stealing if I took an apple out of the basket in the store when the storekeeper was not looking?"

"Yes Dick."

"Then I stole yesterday."

"Come Dick answer me again [illegible] honest now. What would you do if I should bow to you in the street?"

"I should speak I suppose."

"And what would you say?"

"I don't know."

"Does your teacher bow to you in the street?"

"No. She says, 'O Dick is that you?' and she asks me how I do and I don't say anything."

"Has she never told you what to say when you are spoken to?"

"Yes but I can't remember [illegible]"

One of the most inhuman cases of cruelty to animals that has come under observation occurred in Gray last week. A man whose name we did not learn was hauling wood. The sled was too heavily loaded and the horse failed to start it. The driver took a cord wood stick from the pile and beat the poor animal fearfully, cutting his lower lip so that it hung down. Then becoming even more desperate he caught hold of the tongue of the horse, and actually pulled it out by the roots and threw it away. He then drove the horse into the woods and killed him. The man who was with him told the story, and the tongue was found and brought to Portland, and the case given to Agent Sawyer, who procured a warrant, and the wretch was probably arrested Saturday.

THE POLITICAL SITUATION.

A full year has passed since the candidate of the Republican party was installed in the office of President of the United States after a contest of unparalleled excitement, in which the final victory was due to the heroic firmness and unflinching courage of the Republicans of three Southern States. Rutherford B. Hayes reached the Executive Chair by virtue of the devotion of the loyal colored people of the South to Republican principles, which had vindicated the prophecy of Lincoln that the ballot in the hand of the freedman may some day preserve the jewel of liberty in the diadem of the Republic. On the 5th of March he delivered his Inaugural Address, in which he distinctly avowed the Republican doctrine of enforcing equal rights before the law, and explicitly recognized that a moral obligation rests upon the National Government to employ its Constitutional powers and influence to establish the rights of the people it has emancipated and to protect them in the enjoyment of those rights whenever they are infringed or assailed. The half admitted doubts which had flitted like shadows across the minds of some earnest Republicans at the rumors and reports of mysterious conferences with Southern Democratic leaders has appeared in the public prints, were brushed away by the apparent candor and soundness of the Inaugural, and when President Hayes closed his Address he stood as the honored head of a great party aroused to unusual enthusiasm by the exciting struggle with the desperate and revolutionary Democracy. Two days later on the 7th of March, he sent to the Senate for confirmation the names of the persons he had chosen to form his Cabinet, and the list afforded a sufficient evidence in itself that the President has gained renouncing allegiance to the party which elected him, and gave but too strong confirmation to the fears excited by hints of a bargain to abandon Republican principles. On the day when the despatch announcing the nominations for the Cabinet appeared in our telegraphic columns, March 8, we denounced the action of the President in an editorial article, the opening paragraph of which we reprint [illegible] as follows:

"We cannot say we were completely surprised by the announcement of the remarkable selections made by President Hayes for his Cabinet, for rumor and report have been so rife as to prepare us in some sort for what has taken place. But we are bitterly disappointed. In our hope that the rumors would prove to have been unjust to President Hayes, and that he would be too sagacious to be influenced by political visionaries and too conscientious to ignore all obligations to the great party which did battle for him and elected him as the representative of its principles. The people of the two great parties in this country formulate their principles in party platforms, select candidates to represent those principles, and when those candidates are chosen the party which elected them have a right to demand that the Administration shall be organized and conducted in harmony with the pledges and obligations of the canvass. Any other course makes popular elections a farce and renders it impossible for the will of the people to find expression and control the policy of the Government. President Hayes seems to have failed to apprehend this fact, and with a fatality from which no amount of illustrious examples seems capable of warning public men, he appears to believe that he can succeed where others have failed—in attempting to build up a personal party by ignoring obligations to those who elected him, and by making overtures to the political opposition. Such a course may not be prompted by a desire for purely personal aggrandizement, for men occasionally persuade themselves that they are specially called to work out some great result by exceptional and eccentric means, but the disorganizing effects and the practical breach of faith with a National constituency are as inevitable in the one case as the other."

Following close upon this affront to the party which had elected him came intimations of a "new policy" involving the surrender of the Republicans of the South and condonation of the Administration with the leaders of the White League of Louisiana and the Rifle Clubs of South Carolina. On the 9th of March we denounced the so-called Conciliation policy as a base surrender of the people who won the Republican victory and an outrage upon every dictate of justice and honor.

How the sequel has developed has now become a matter of history. The past twelve months have witnessed a continuous surrender to the arrogant and lawless demands of the Southern Democracy and a contemptuous disregard on their part of all the pledges so readily accepted by a weak and truckling Administration. To-day the Republican Party of the South is given over powerless into the hands of the organized disloyalty of that section, and the very men who wheedled a recreant President into the betrayal of his supporters, are now persecuting and driving to prison on trumped-up charges, the very men to whose fidelity to the Republican Party, President Hayes owes his own seat. Nor is the Southern situation alone disheartening, for we find the Administration busily and zealously engaged in disorganizing the Republican Party in the North by every means in its power.

It needs but a brief sojourn at the National Capitol to convince any intelligent person of the utter demoralization which has followed the attempted coalition between a Republican Administration and the Democratic leaders of the solid South. They no longer ask favors with mock-humility, but dictate their own terms at the White House, and then fling contemptuous epithets on the floor of Congress at the Executive who has so humbled himself to conciliate them. The political atmosphere of Washington has more flavor of the Confederacy than of loyal sentiment and the leaders of the Lost Cause boast that they have gained in getting control of the whole country instead of merely a section.

Already the calendars of the two branches of Congress bear tangible evidence of the designs upon the Treasury, which we have hitherto charged only to be met with scoffing incredulity, and the determination of the representatives of the South to make all possible reprisals upon the people of the North is no longer concealed. It is but a daily occurrence in the House for men to deny that there is any wrong in treason, and only a few days since a Mississippi member occupied the floor with a glowing eulogy of Jeff Davis and a boast of his own aggravated disloyalty.

The campaign has opened with bills for Southern pensions, for Southern claims, for Southern improvements, for Southern indemnities, and the way is being cleared for the restoration of Confederate officers to the posts they deserted in the Army, by a bill calculated to drive out of the service the men who aided in crushing out the Rebellion. The whole tendency of Democratic legislation under Southern control is so obvious that none but the blind can fail to see whither we are drifting.

And yet, with all these developments which have caused even the policy organs to concede that the rapacity of a solid South must be confronted by a solid North, the Administration goes on disintegrating the Republican Party and playing into the hands of the Shot-gun leader of the South.

The political history of the past year and the situation to-day furnish a melancholy verification of the warning and protest that we uttered on the 8th of March, 1877.

POLITICAL AND PERSONAL.

The Jersey City Journal thinks it about time to drop the civil service "show" and own up.

Perhaps the renomination of Beard was the President's long expected message to Congress on the subject of civil service reform. Anyway there are volumes in it.—Worcester Press.

In the face of all civil service reform, in the face of all political faith and honesty, in the face of statesmanship and even of decency, the President obeys the bidding of his two senatorial supporters and turns Mr. Simmons out from the office which he has so well filled—turns him out without the faintest shadow of a charge against him, and against the indignant protests of all who are so situated as to know how the office has been conducted.—Concord [illegible]

THE PRESIDENT'S PECULIARITIES.

THE APPOINTMENT OF NORTHRUP AS U. S. DISTRICT ATTORNEY IN SOUTH CAROLINA.

In printing the following statement the Boston Traveller editorially remarks that it is from a gentleman who has an intimate acquaintance with the subject and all the parties concerned. His narrative is confined to one case, but it is just as applicable to the Simmons case, the Marble case in Maine, the Methuen, St. Louis and Cincinnati Post Office cases and to scores of others. There is certainly a peculiarity in these things. Here are the interesting facts:

Soon after the President had formally announced his new Southern policy, United States District Attorney Stone of South Carolina came to Washington and called on Attorney General Devens. South Carolina matters were fully discussed. The official conduct of Mr. Stone was warmly commended by Mr. Devens. Mr. Stone then stated that he understood that the President intended to try a new policy in South Carolina and that this new policy included a complete change of federal officers in the State. If such was the case he wished the Attorney General to understand that he, Stone, did not want to be removed, that when they wanted his place they had only to let him know and he would at once send in his resignation. To this the Attorney General replied that there was to be no change of policy and of federal officers in South Carolina, and that in carrying out the President's plan Mr. Stone's place would probably be wanted. It was also suggested that perhaps it would be as well for Mr. Stone to make out his resignation then and there, to be accepted when his successor was appointed.

Accordingly Mr. Stone wrote out his resignation to take effect when his successor was appointed and left it with Mr. Devens. Within two days he was surprised by a notice received through the mail that his resignation had been accepted to take effect at once. Believing that civil service reform was to be the guiding rule in making civil appointments, Mr. Stone called on the President in company with his assistant, who was in Washington at the time. They had a long conference with the President. The state of affairs in South Carolina was talked over, and Mr. Stone explained at length the condition of the Ellenton slaughter cases, and pointed out the necessity of appointing some one as his successor who knew about these cases and who would see that both black and white Republicans in that State had justice in United States courts. To all of the points made the President freely and warmly assented. Mr. Stone then recommended his assistant, Mr. Ellis, as his successor, urging that he knew more of the Ellenton cases than any other available candidate and that he had the courage and ability to see justice done in all cases. Mr. Stone left the President with the impression that Mr. Ellis would be appointed.

When the President returned from his Southern trip made in company with Gen. Wade Hampton during which conciliated Southerners called for "three cheers for Hampton and Hayes!" he announced that he had appointed Judge Northrup to the vacant District Attorneyship of South Carolina. An ex-Union officer from Ohio, a warm personal friend of the President, had his attention called to the record of Northrup as a creature of Moses and Whipper, the injustice that would result in settling a tool of Hampton's to try the Ellenton murderers, and the man's personal unfitness for the place. This gentleman called upon the President and showed up Northrup's record. The President said that Northrup was recommended by many South Carolina Republicans, and that Gen. Hampton desired his appointment, that he had not removed Stone, that he urged him to stay, but he would not, and had he known Northrup's character he probably would not have appointed him. The result of this interview was generally talked over among those acquainted with South Carolina affairs. The statement was made that Mr. Stone's account of his interview did not agree with the President's talk to the Ohio gentleman. The result was that about Nov. 1st a Senator who is better posted on South Carolina affairs than any one not a resident of the State, called on the President. South Carolina affairs came up for a free discussion. The Senator in the course of the talk, alluded to the removal of Stone and the unfitness of Northrup for the place, and pointed out the injustice to Republicans that must ensue. The President again stated that he did not remove Stone, that Stone would resign, even though he had urged him to remain, and that had he known all about Northrup he would not have appointed him.

When D. T. Corbin heard of the tenor of the Senator's interview with the President, he wrote to Stone and asked him for a statement of his conference with the President early in the summer. Mr. Stone's reply was in substance the statement with which this article opens. He went on to say that the President never once asked him to stay, nor intimated a wish even to that effect.

Mr. Ellis, Mr. Stone's assistant, wrote to the same effect. The President soon afterward repeated to a Western Senator that he had asked Stone not to resign.

The Judiciary Committee of the Senate, of which Senator Christiancy is chairman, reported adversely upon Northrup's case, just before the close of the extra session, on the ground of his personal unfitness and want of ability for the place. The President then caused a withdrawal of the appointment to be telegraphed to Northrup. In December Senator Christiancy called on Corbin, the claimant for Hamburg Butler's seat, and, saying that he came from the President, offered him the vacant District Attorneyship. Before this time, however, the President, in a conversation with Corbin, had referred to the report of the Judiciary Committee in Northrup's case, and said that in his opinion Northrup was unfit for the place, and that he should not send his name to the Senate again. During the first week of January, Corbin, though urged by hundreds of the leading Republicans of South Carolina and by ex-Governor Chamberlain and many others in Washington and the North, refused the proffered place.

Within forty-eight hours after his refusal was known at the White House, Mr. Northrup's name was again sent to the Senate by the President. The Judiciary Committee, Senator Christiancy, chairman, again reported adversely. The Senate, last week, confirmed the appointment, all the Democrats and Senators Burnside, Christiancy, Dawes, Hoar and Matthews voting in the affirmative.

BRITISH POETS. The Poetical Works of Sir Walter Scott, ten volumes complete in 8vo, published by Hurd & Houghton, Riverside Press, Cambridge. We have received this Riverside Edition of Scott's poems, which is to be followed with uniform editions of the other British Poets. The set of five volumes 8vo comprises some 500 pages each, printed in the fine style which characterizes the work of that publishing house and handsomely bound in maroon cloth with gilt tops and ribbon marker. The poems in this edition are reprinted from the standard edition of Cadell, Edinburgh 1851, with the smaller pieces of that edition arranged continuously. There are also included various trifles printed in the Lockhart Biography and not generally received into the collections together with the poetry of the Waverley Novels. The first volume contains a fine steel portrait of the author at the age of 50 and also a Memoir taken from the edition published by Adam and Charles Black, Edinburgh, in 1853. The volumes are printed on good paper in fine clear type with ample margins, and the annotations and commentaries are conveniently arranged. The publishers have evidently taken great pains to present an accurate and complete edition, which they furnish at the moderate price of $8.75 for the set of five volumes. The sets are enclosed in a neat box and may be obtained at D. Bugbee & Co.'s.

Mr Hamlin introduced a bill to prohibit members of Congress from becoming parties on certain bonds Referred

A great part of the morning hour was occupied in reporting and considering unimportant bills

Mr Wallace who is in charge of unfinished business being unavoidably absent, the bond bill was passed over with the understanding that it should retain its place as unfinished business

Mr Beck called the resolution submitted by him some time ago relative to levy and collection of taxes for maintenance of the sinking fund, and spoke at length in favor of the resolution

The amendments to the House bill making an appropriation for the payment of claims allowed by the Secretary of the Treasury were concurred in

The Senate went into executive session and when the doors were reopened adjourned

House

Mr Crapo from the Committee on Foreign Affairs reported a bill supplementary to the act to carry into effect the convention between the United States and China of March 3 1859 and to give the Court of Claims jurisdiction in certain cases The bill authorizes any person or persons having any claim against the balance of the fund heretofore awarded Chinese indemnity for losses sustained by plunder of the barque Caller in 1854 to commence suit in the Court of Claims

Mr Cavanaugh asked whether this bill affected the position of the balance of the fund

Mr Crapo replied that it did not

Mr Garfield said he always followed as a matter of good faith that the United States ought to pay the balance back to China He first named every dollar he remembered that the word several hundred thousand dollars in the State Department at that did not belong to this country

Mr Cox said the subject was being thoroughly considered by the Committee on Foreign Affairs

Mr Blount agreed with Mr Garfield and said this bill would remove the last cloud against that fund

The House then went into Committee of the Whole on the Fortification bill

The bill was read and without amendment it was ordered to be reported to the House

The Committee then took up for consideration the bill authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to employ temporary clerks and making an appropriation for the same also making appropriation for protecting trespass on public lands and for arresting those who invade public lands in the United States

When the engineer undertook to start the train at one of the stations beyond Portland he found he was unable to move the cars and on examination it was discovered that the breaks on the Express car were set up, and that the door was broken open. The parties had made a general examination of the contents of the car, and when they left the train took two or three minor packages with them

CITY AFFAIRS

The City Council at its last regular meeting of the municipal year held last evening transacted the following business

The board of Aldermen first met as a Board of Municipal officers for the purpose of hearing the application of Judd & Robertson for liberty to erect a steam engine and after considerable discussion license was granted as prayed for

IN BOARD OF ALDERMEN

The Treasurer's statement of current expenses for the past municipal year showing a large unexpended balance on hand upon which to commence a new municipal year was submitted with the following introductory communication

Hon A C Hamlin, Mayor,—Dear Sir From such examination as I have been able to give I find that a floating debt has accumulated at the close of every municipal year since 1868 (with the exception of 1875 76) in excess of funds on hand, varying from $2 000 to $50,000 It now appears that no similar debt will exist at the close of the present municipal year and I am in hopes that we shall have a fair cash balance to commence the new year

Yours respectfully

JOHN L CROSBY, Treasurer

	180,600

I have paid since date of my last report, notes given for loan of $15000 in 1875, and also the balance due on State tax for 1877, and no floating debt exists against the city, to my knowledge. The decision of the City Council on the settlement of the Merrills Mills bridges contract has been accepted, and the balance due contractors is paid. It will be seen that no department has expended all its fund, except that there is a balance against the interest fund This I hope to be able to change to a credit balance before closing the books for the year

Respectfully submitted,

JOHN L CROSBY, City Treasurer.

Alderman Thatcher rose at the conclusion of the reading and said

Mr. Chairman—I have before me a copy of the Commercial of the date of Feb. 25, 1878, containing an article headed "The Condition of Bangor," in which the writer portrays the affairs of the city in such a sad condition that I have felt it a duty to the good name of our city abroad, as well as to our citizens at home, to give an authoritative statement of the expenses of the past municipal year, with a statement also of the probable amount of tax which will have to be raised the coming year, based upon the actual expenses of the present year now drawing to a close. I have also had prepared a comparative statement of the working departments for this year and the previous one, showing that we have done considerable towards reducing our actual expenses. This I have done in justice to the present city government. The article referred to gives the probable expenses of the municipal year as follows:

State Tax	$40 000
County Tax	26 000
Int. on Municipal Indebtedness	30 000
" " R & P R R. Bond	30,000
Sinking fund. receipt. from R R.	28,000
Total	$144 000
Expenses of other Departments estimated from the present year's expenditures
Highways	30 000
Schools	23 000
Paupers	12 000
Fire	11,000
Police	5 000
Salaries	3 000
Gas	5,000
Incidental and Overlayings	20 000
Interest on Taxes	5 000
	138 000
Deduct estimated amount of receipts from The Water Service above expenses	192,600
Deduct 4000 polls at $3 each	12 000
	180,600
	1 00
	180 600

This would make the tax upon the present valuation about 2 65 per cent

FOURTH DAY'S PROCEEDINGS

State vs Frederic C Morrill Indictment embezzlement

Court came in at 9 o'clock Testimony for prosecution continued

Mr Prescott on the stand

Witness I aided Mr Crossman throughout in the investigation of City Agency affairs, Mr Crossman's estimates are perfectly accurate, we together verified them from the books; did not personally review the schedule exhibited yesterday by Mr. Crossman.

Cross-examination All my examinations have been confined to Mr Morrill's administration

Mr Richmond Haywood recalled by defence

Witness Remember that Mayor Hamlin called at the Agency about the time he (Mayor) testified to first examining the sales book, the invoice book was always kept in a drawer in the counting room, always open to investigation; no invoices were ever left in the desk in the store; do not remember that the Mayor made any talk with Mr. Morrill about books, at the time of the Mayor's last visit, or the day we left the store.

Mayor Hamlin recalled by defence.

Council for defence read to witness an extract from a report of remarks publicly made by witness in City Hall, and asked him if he said it, objected to by prosecution and recalled by the court.

Here the prosecution rested. Testimony for government all in.

Judge Clark opened for defence.

Briefly showed the position of defence in this case; you are arraigned here substantially on the charge of stealing, called embezzlement; prosecution have elected to take your verdict on the amount embezzled by Mr. Morrill on the date of his final settlement; but we meet every and all their required allegations, the substance of all the charges against respondent is that Mr Morrill must have received a large amount of money more than he accounted for to the City; they don't show how or when he has ever taken one cent, they bring in what they call experts to show on paper what respondent's profits should have been, but failed utterly to show what they actually were they have attempted to build up a case on invoices which are freely acknowledged by both sides to be incorrect in many instances, they have calculated the profits upon the amount of liquors billed to Mr Morrill upon the basis of their gross gauge marks upon the barrels, which their own witnesses have shown to be considerably over the true measurement, its true they have made an insignificant allowance for wastage, evaporation etc, amounting in all to nine gills per day, for twenty seven broken packages from which Mr Morrill retailed, this includes all their allowance for short age, and outage which actually amounted to gallons

This is the substance of their general charge we need not offer testimony to show the falsity of these estimates their own witnesses have done it for us Mr Haywood has repeatedly testified that he never knew of an instance where either he or Mr Morrill sold liquor without putting the item upon the sales book, how could it have been that those peculations which the prosecution have so vainly attempted to show, could have been carried on without the cognizance of Mr Haywood who made as many items upon the sales book and sold to as many customers as did Mr Morrill, but no imputation of dishonesty has been cast upon Mr Haywood and is it probable or possible that Mr Morrill could have stole $1800, under the eye of his assistant whose integrity the prosecution have frequently complimented its almost ridiculous absurdity

Let us now review some of their specific allegations They say that he gave no account to the city of the invoice of March Mr Haywood attended to the business during my absence remember that I carried over the sales book from the office, two or three invoices with the statement for March '77 to City Clerk to be presented to committee on accounts and claims, did not always see the invoices with the monthly statement; don't know how it happened that I did not notice the fourth invoice among the vouchers which I carried to City Clerk

Cross-examined Have had opportunity to examine my sales book since trial commenced my principal sales to druggists were to those of Bangor think I sold to all of them but never calculated how much have not visited druggists to inquire as to the quantity purchased by them, think we always made discount to druggists labels on casks contained the sale prices and name of liquor, did not tear a label from any cask on leaving the Agency; have never said to any one that I did so tear any label; used care to see that casks were correctly tallied from were light only measured one cask of the liquors received from Colton Mr Woodbury visited the Agency more frequently than any other of the Committee on City Agency, all of the Committee examined my books at different times, made no mention of any errors, heard somebody say at City Hall on Jan'y 16th that I had kept back money during the early part of my term, don't remember that I ever told anyone that I kept back the money to pay incidental expenses; may have said so, Mr Crosby never asked me to withhold money due the City, because it was scrip, but said that he would prefer that I should pay as little change as possible, as he could not get rid of it, passed off a quantity of scrip to Mr. Fisk who bought eggs through the country, perhaps $400, per month; Alderman Woodbury told me to keep my invoice book and cash book until I made my first settlement; have made several attempts to come to a final settlement, think the chairman of the Committee on accounts and claims informed me that it was unnecessary to send in the invoices as vouchers with the monthly statement; don't know how it happened that I did not notice the fourth invoice among the vouchers which I carried to City Clerk with settlement for March 77, probably an oversight, the item for the freight on that invoice appears on my bill of incidental expenses for March, while agent I bought on my own account some elder barrels which I sold to countrymen at the final settlement with Mr Crosby I read off the figures from the cash book and sold them, I transferred the amount of daily sales to the cash book every night and about 8.51 besides which represents the total cash overrun, was surveyor of lumber for some 12 years did my own gauging most of the time

Mr Simon Bradbury called by defence and sworn—Witness Am a member of the Committee on Liquor Agency from Board of Aldermen Mr Morrill came into my office on the day he settled with Mr Crosby, said he wanted to settle his account with the committee, called on me next day on the same business said I was ready to give him my attention whenever the chairman—Mayor Hamlin—would appoint a time to come over the matter I have known Mr Morrill for 15 or 20 years, so far as I know his reputation for honesty good

Mr W B Hayford called by defence sworn—Witness Was Mayor of Bangor in 1876 was Chairman of Committee on City Agency, collected many samples of liquors from the store, kept the invoice in the office, kept invoices as received with invoice book, kept my books in precisely the same manner as did my predecessor, no one ever suggested any charge always intended to enter sales on book, usually compared invoices with marks upon the barrel, marks usually agreed noticed that some of the packages were not full think I inspected all the liquors received, remember of measuring one package of gin which I received from Mr Colton it was gauged 20 gallons, we measured it 17, when Colton turned over the Agency to me, gauged them standing on end I estimated that liquor received from Colton ran short 8100, worth, usually drew the liquor from the original packages into the barrels from which we retailed it, sometimes bottled liquors came perfect but usually found a number broken, returned 16 gallons of rye whiskey to State agent, gave city credit for it; one barrel of rye whiskey had a lead patched up with plaster of paris, lost from this about 15 gallons, made discount to druggists of about 12½ per cent never have calculated the amount of sales to druggists, added sales at close of day's work counted cash in the morning, if it did not agree with books would make a minute of the over run or fall short kept the cash in a tin chest put to City Treasurer at end of week whatever cash I had on hand that I thought he would be willing to take, deposited the trunk in Mr Blake's vault at night does not know dollar from the color of his own paper, was not engaged in any business that required the use of money had occasion at several times to borrow money, before drawing my salary borrowed of my daughter, end of my own always had funds in the trunk, always charged Hayden to druggists unless they gave other instructions, James, Mr Hayward occasionally assisted me in counting the money and adding columns, was away several times during my term of office perhaps one week in all Mr Hayward attended to the business during my absence remember that I carried over the sales book constantly sent or carried over invoices with the statement for March '77 to City Clerk to be presented to committee on accounts and claims, did not always see the invoices with the monthly statement, don't know how it happened that I did not notice the fourth invoice among the vouchers which I carried to City Clerk with settlement for March 77, probably an oversight, the item for the freight on that invoice appears on my bill of incidental expenses for March, while agent I bought on my own account some elder barrels which I sold to countrymen at the final settlement with Mr Crosby I read off the figures from the cash book and sold them, I transferred the amount of daily sales to the cash book every night and about 8.51 besides which represents the total cash overrun, was surveyor of lumber for some 12 years did my own gauging most of the time

Cross-examined—I signed Mr Gould's bank checks which he got cashed it being at the agency the checks were payable to George Black or bearer, I think I saw them among my old papers

Mr J C White sworn—Witness was one of the Committee on City Agency for 1877 occasionally visit the agency Mr Morrill on this as assistant went in and out and attentive to customers examined the books found them correct and in good order frequently found customers waiting to be served

Mr W B Hayford called by defence sworn—Witness Was Mayor of Bangor in 1876 was Chairman of Committee on City Agency, collected many samples of liquors from the store, kept the invoice in the office, kept invoices as received with invoice book, kept my books in precisely the same manner as did my predecessor, no one ever suggested any charge always intended to enter sales on book, usually compared invoices with marks upon the barrel, marks usually agreed noticed that some of the packages were not full think I inspected all the liquors received, remember of measuring one package of gin which I received from Mr Colton it was gauged 20 gallons, we measured it 17, when Colton turned over the Agency to me, gauged them standing on end I estimated that liquor received from Colton ran short 8100, worth, usually drew the liquor from the original packages into the barrels from which we retailed it, sometimes bottled liquors came perfect but usually found a number broken, returned 16 gallons of rye whiskey to State agent, gave city credit for it; one barrel of rye whiskey had a lead patched up with plaster of paris, lost from this about 15 gallons, made discount to druggists of about 12½ per cent never have calculated the amount of sales to druggists, added sales at close of day's work counted cash in the morning, if it did not agree with books would make a minute of the over run or fall short kept the cash in a tin chest put to City Treasurer at end of week whatever cash I had on hand that I thought he would be willing to take, deposited the trunk in Mr Blake's vault at night does not know dollar from the color of his own paper, was not engaged in any business that required the use of money had occasion at several times to borrow money, before drawing my salary borrowed of my daughter, end of my own always had funds in the trunk, always charged Hayden to druggists unless they gave other instructions, James, Mr Hayward occasionally assisted me in counting the money and adding columns, was away several times during my term of office perhaps one week in all Mr Hayward attended to the business during my absence remember that I carried over the sales book constantly sent or carried over invoices with the statement for March '77 to City Clerk to be presented to committee on accounts and claims, did not always see the invoices with the monthly statement, don't know how it happened that I did not notice the fourth invoice among the vouchers which I carried to City Clerk
